Veterans, Their Sons and Daughters Have Part in Exercises.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Lexington, Va., January 19.—General Robert E. Lee's birthday was observed in Lexington today with a dinner to Confederate veterans, given by the Sons of Confederate Veterans and served by the Daughters of the Confederacy. It was held in the Presbyterian lecture-room, which occupies the site of the old Sunday schoolroom in which General Stonewall Jackson conducted his Sunday school. Ninety-three veterans and eighty-three sons gathered around the banquet board.

Reverend Commandment Greenlee D. Letcher, of Camp Frank Paxton, Sons of Confederate Veterans, presided and addresses were made by Mr. Letcher, who welcomed the veterans, William A. Anderson, who responded for the veterans; Professor W. S. Currell, of Washington and Lee faculty, who responded to the toast, "General Robert E. Lee"; Rev. Henry W. McLaughlin, who responded to the toast, "The Private Soldier of the Confederacy"; and Colonel Hunter Pendleton, of Virginia Military Institute faculty, who toasted "The Women of the Confederacy."

Crosses of honor were awarded to a number of veterans by the Daughters. The veterans and sons marched from the courthouse to the lecture-room, led by the Virginia Institute band and a detachment of Virginia Military Institute cadets.

Observed in Lynchburg.
Lynchburg, Va., January 19.—The anniversary of General Lee's birthday was observed here today by local veterans and daughters of the V. M. C. A., when Dr. Joseph E. Dunn made an address on some glimpses of General Lee. Crosses of honor, which were to have been presented by the daughters, failed to arrive, but certificates were given, upon which they will be claimed later. The following: F. M. C. A., G. F. Gilliam, G. T. Lavender and P. B. Hughes, veterans, and Henry Miller, son of a veteran, the schools also observed the day with special exercises.

Vardaman Makes Address.
Alexandria, Va., January 19.—Senator Vardaman, of Mississippi, was the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the V. M. C. A., held last night. Senator John Sharp Williams, who was a guest, also delivered a short address. Other speakers were Representative Lloyd, Missouri, and Rev. J. W. Duffey, D. D.

pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Lee's farewell address was read by Adjutant Edgar Warfield, and invocation was pronounced by Rev. W. J. Morton, pastor of Christ Episcopal Church. The banquet was served by a committee of women of the various Confederate organizations. It was attended by nearly 100 veterans and Sons of Veterans.

Harrisonburg Observes Day.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Harrisonburg, Va., January 19.—Aided by a chorus of 100 Normal School girls, Harrisonburg Daughters of the Confederacy and the Lee Literary Society of the Normal School held Lee birthday exercises today in the Town Hall. An address on Lee was made by former Commonwealth's Attorney George N. Conrad.

Services at Christiansburg.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Christiansburg, Va., January 19.—The anniversary of General Lee's birthday was appropriately celebrated here today. The Hamilton Wade Chapter, E. D. C., served lunch to fifty-five veterans, and Dr. W. S. Neighbors, of Bristol, made an address, at which time the courtroom was packed to its utmost. There were songs by the school children, music by the high school orchestra, and the old soldiers gave two selections, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," which were most enthusiastically received.

Hemphill Is Orator.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Winchester, Va., January 19.—Robert E. Lee's birthday was celebrated here tonight by Turner Ashby Camp, Confederate Veterans, in the Handley Library auditorium. Major J. C. Hemphill, of Washington, spoke on the life of Lee, after which he was the honor guest at a reception by Fairfax Club. Confederate motion pictures were shown in the theatre.

VETERANS HONOR CHIEF THEY LOVED

Military Takes Part in Celebrating Birthday of General Robert E. Lee.

SCENE WAS IMPRESSIVE

Stood Silently by Monument and Then Marched Silently Away.

Veterans of the War Between the States, their sons and their grandsons in the Richmond Blues and the Richmond Howitzers and a small army of patriotic citizens yesterday afternoon paid tribute to the name and memory of General Robert E. Lee. And elsewhere, in all parts of the world where two or three sons of the South were gathered together, homage was paid to the man who in his own person immortalized an idea and left to fame the spirit of a favored land.

Not more than half a hundred veterans were at Lee Monument. During the year just ended fifty-six from the Soldiers' Home had joined the greater host, and are with the silent bivouac of the dead.

The afternoon seemed cast for the simple ceremony. The skies were shrouded in sombre clouds, and a few drops of rain fell on the bare heads of the year-ridden soldiers as they stood at attention around the base of the great monument. But a slight breeze drifting from the West stirred the folds of the flag under which they had marched to victory and to Appomattox, and the old men reared their heads to the once familiar sight. Behind them and encircling them, seated in automobiles and carriages or standing silently about, were the men and women of today, the generation of tomorrow and some who still prattle in their mothers' arms. So, remembering themselves and the glory of their former legions, the age-bitten veterans carried themselves proudly and erect, marching bravely to brave music and keeping time with their sons.

Few Veterans in Line.
But the scene was one of significant pathos. The veterans were so few, their sons were so many, that every one was struck with the knowledge that this memorial duty will soon be performed by those who never wore the gray. The veterans were so few that they did not go inside the inclosure in which the monument is reared. Once their living number would have filled the space, but today they would hardly have made a blot against the granite wall on which "Traveler and his master stand." Arrived at the circle of the monument, where many had gathered to await them, the veterans of Lee Camp drew up in a pitifully thin line on the

"Eat More Bread"

Of course you should "eat more bread"—and less meat—but be sure your "bread" contains all the body-building material in the whole wheat, prepared in digestible form. The only "bread" that fulfills all these requirements is

Shredded Wheat

It is made of whole wheat, steam-cooked, shredded and baked. It is a natural, elemental food and is not treated or compounded with anything. Its purity, cleanliness and food value stand unchallenged, being endorsed by the highest health and dietetic authorities in the United States and Canada. Every grocer sells it.

Always heat the Biscuit in oven to restore crispness. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with hot milk or cream will supply all the energy needed for a half day's work. Deliciously nourishing when eaten in combination with baked apples, stewed prunes, sliced bananas or canned or preserved fruits. Try toasted Triscuit, the Shredded Wheat wafer, for luncheon with butter, cheese or marmalade.

Feel Out of Sorts?

It's a good idea to look for the cause!

One common, but often unsuspected, cause is coffee-drinking. Yet some persons seem able to get along with coffee—at least for a time. But when headachy, bilious days come, breakfast or some other meal doesn't taste good; and the day's work goes wrong. (Ever feel that way?)—then it's time to find out for sure if coffee is causing the trouble in your case.

There's a subtle, poisonous drug, "caffeine," in coffee that interferes with the normal function of body, brain and nerves, and has a lot to do with one's comfort and progress.

Suppose for a test you try the simple expedient of quitting coffee and using well-made —a pure food-drink made of choice wheat. It has a delightful, Java-like flavour, but is absolutely free from caffeine or any other drug.

POSTUM

After ten days or two weeks you will be able to decide whether to go back to coffee troubles, or stick to Postum and peace and comfort.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water and adding cream and sugar to taste.

Grocers everywhere sell both kinds.

"There's a Reason" for POSTUM

south, the Blues stood to the west and the Howitzers took the north side, veterans and militia forming a half-circle around the statue. Governor Mann, seated in a carriage with General J. Thompson Brown, and Governor-Elect Stuart and Lieutenant-Governor Elyson, in a carriage together, took position with the veterans, and behind them came in carriages a few members of the Daughters of the Confederacy. The police kept the crowds back.

Flags Droop and Flutter.
For ten minutes the crowds stood there, ranged beneath a pall of silence. There was hardly even a movement, and it seemed as if a silent prayer were being offered in the name of Lee, who would lead them. The flags drooped and fluttered in the breeze, and as if in parting salute, the sun for a moment broke through the clouds. Then came a sharp rattle in command, there was a blast of music, and the veterans of Lee Camp once more turned their faces to the east and marched slowly out of Monument Avenue. Behind them stepped the Blues, Howitzers swung behind the column. When the veterans and Blues had marched away, the Howitzers about-faced and took up position to the northeast of the statue. Many thought they were to fire a salute, but in a few moments they, too, marched away, and the memorial ceremony to General Lee was at an end.

The parade started shortly after 3 o'clock from Seventh and Grace Streets. The column was headed by mounted police under command of Sergeant R. B. Sewell. Following came the staff officers of the city, the Sons of Confederate Veterans, Governor Mann and Confederate Veterans, Governor-Elect Stuart and Lieutenant-Governor Elyson, the Daughters of the Confederacy, and then the fragmentary line of veterans. The Richmond Blues with Major Howies in command, came behind, and the Richmond Howitzers, in command of Lieutenant Howies, brought up the rear.

The streets were crowded and there were hearty cheers. A one of the remnants of Lee's army, with its escort, moved up the street at Fifth Street, and then proceeded into Monument Avenue, and so to the scene of the ceremonial.

Stood There in Silence.
Though the streets were loud with cheers and clapping on the march, not a voice was raised when the column arrived at the monument. Cheering, perhaps, would have been out of place. The tense silence added to the touching tribute, as silence adds to the solemnity around an open grave. A slow and mournful marching air led the column to the monument, but a lively, rolling air brought them back. The ancient custom of weeping for the fallen for soldiers held it that it is not well to think too long upon memories that are sad.

The memorial day was fittingly observed in other manner in the city. The Business Men's Club kept open house from 12 o'clock to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, inviting all city officers to come as guests. A general holiday was observed in the City Hall, and there were private memorial observances. Lee Camp held a camp-fire meeting last night. War-time stories were told by men who had fought under Lee and Jackson, and the night ended with refreshments for the gray-haired soldiers.

REWARD HIS SERVICE

R. E. Lee Camp, C. V., Presents Badge to Quartermaster-General Brown. Listening to many a song and story of camp-fire life, the members of R. E. Lee Camp, Confederate Veterans, enjoyed themselves last night after the fashion which only an old soldier knows, harking back to the days when they were young and war was but a fine spice to life. The meeting was presided over by Commander E. D. Taylor, who introduced the several speakers of the evening, and then led the way back to the refreshment table.

The feature of the evening was the presentation of a badge to Quartermaster-General David A. Brown, Jr., in token of his faithful service at the Gettysburg reunion last summer. Addresses were made by Brigadier-General W. B. Freeman, General Stith Bolling, of Petersburg; Judge D. C. Richardson, of Colonial Heights; and the Rev. Dudley Powers, of Washington, D. C., and Colonel Hutchinson, of Manassas. Music was furnished by Kessnich's Band, and refreshments were served to the guests and members.

CHURCH CATCHES FIRE

Congregation Files Out Without Any Semblance of Panic.
Danville, Va., January 19.—While the evening service was in progress in the Second Baptist Church last night an usher, who was standing down from where a terra cotta flag goes through the ceiling, He quietly informed the Rev. W. E. Brook, who interrupted the hymn which was then being sung and asked everybody to leave the church in an orderly manner, as the roof was on fire. The people obeyed without the semblance of fear or panic, and the fire department was called out. A chemical extinguisher did all that was necessary. While answering the call two horses of a triple hitch wagon fell and were badly scarred and bruised.

Pimples Should Be Watched
May be Means of Absorbing Harmful Germs in Most Unexpected Manner.

Every research laboratory has collected a vast amount of information regarding the spread of blood diseases. In thousands of instances the most virulent types have been the result of coming in contact with germs in public places, and the apparently insignificant pimple has been the cause. It spreads with astonishing rapidity, often infecting the entire system in a few days.

It is fortunate, however, that there is a remedy to cope quickly and thoroughly with such a condition, and thanks to the energy of its producers the famous S. S. S. may be had at almost any drug store in the civilized world.

This preparation stands alone as a blood purifier. It is somewhat revolutionary in its composition, since it accomplishes all that was ever claimed for mercury, arsenic, and other destructive mineral drugs, and yet it is absolutely a purely vegetable product. There are more cases of articular rheumatism, locomotor ataxia, paresis, neuritis, and similar diseases resultant from the use of minerals than most people are aware of. These facts are brought out in a highly interesting book compiled by the medical department of The Swift, Specific Co., 230 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

It is mailed free, together with a special letter of advice, to all who are struggling with a blood disorder. Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day of your druggist. Do not accept anything claimed "just as good."
